Devon’s political activities and lobbying are consistent with Devon’s public policy positions and business objectives, some of which are outlined below, and are not predicated on the personal views of Devon’s employees or board of directors. We advocate on matters of public interest and are committed to doing so in compliance with all applicable laws, rules, and regulations. This includes financial disclosures, which are extensive and publicly accessible, outlining our lobbying expenditures. (See Devon’s Sustainability Report for additional detail.)

527 Contributions

From time to time, Devon also supports other tax-exempt organizations, including those organized under section 527 of the Internal Revenue Code, to help advance its public policy goals. Those public policy goals include, but are not limited to:

- Encouraging free and open markets for all products, including oil and natural gas
- Supporting competitive state and federal tax rates
- Recognizing states’ rights to regulate oil and gas operations while opposing a federal “one size fits all” approach
- Growing U.S. energy production
- Supporting safe, science-based and non-duplicative regulations for oil and gas activities
- Encouraging effectiveness and efficiency at all levels of government

In 2019, Devon did not contribute to any 527 organizations.

Devon has not used corporate or DECPAC funds to make any direct independent expenditures on behalf of candidates running for public office.

When necessary, Devon may contribute corporate funds to ballot measures that could affect Devon’s business practices or the communities in which we operate. In 2019, Devon did not contribute to any ballot measures.

Federal Lobbying

In 2019, the company’s federal lobbying expenses totaled approximately $718,337.

includes lobbying expenses incurred by trade associations supported by Devon. These reports are publicly available at lobbyingdisclosure.house.gov.
